6. Read the passage carefully and answer the questions that follow. Thomas Alva Edison was born in 1847 in America. As a little boy he was very inquisitive. He always wanted to know how things were done. Very early in life he showed that he was full of curiosity, a quality which is so important to inventors. In New York he worked for some time as a telephone operator. But soon he became interested in inventions. In a very short time they became his chief business. He built a laboratory at Menlo Park where he had gone to live. Soon afterwards, he invented the phonograph, the first form of the instrument that we now know as gramophone or record player. The word phonograph means something that can write or record sound. Other scientists before Thomas Alva Edison had thought of instruments which would do this. But Edison was the first to make an instrument which actually worked. He also invented incandescent lamp, a lamp in which the light is caused by a heated wire called a filament heated by an electric current. People now use electricity to illuminate their homes. By the time he died in 1931 he had about a thousand inventions to his credit.

6. Read the following passage and answer the questions.

Co-operation means working together for the benefit of all. Without co-operation modern society could not exist. Co-operation has been seen at its best among farmers in the dry regions of certain parts of Australia and America. The fields have been irrigated in these regions. Crops cannot be grown without water. Water cannot be brought to the fields without streams being tapped higher up. For this purpose canals and dams have been built. The canals have been cut through the fields of more than one farmer. Those who live higher up the valley than the others have allowed canals to be built through their land in order to carry water to the fields of farmers lower down. In times of drought all are able to share the water. Instead of taking all the water for themselves, the farmers allow the higher land leave enough for their neighbors down the valley. Farming in dry areas has been made possible by such cooperation. By co-operation farmers have learned to make even the desert produce crops.

6. Read the following passage and answer the questions.

Mechanized farming means the use of modern machinery on farms. On many modern farms the work of labourers is done by up-to-date machines. The use of these machines helps to save a lot of time and labour and brings in big profits. For instance, in modern orchards even the picking of fruit is done by machinery. A tractor with a long metal arm drives up to a tree, fastens its fingers firmly round one of the branches and begins to shake it vigorously. As the ripe fruit drops it is caught by a special device, then it is sent along conveyor belt and packed into large wooden boxes. Only three men are needed to work this tractor, but they can pick about thirty tons of fruit in one day. When the picked fruit is unloaded it is cleaned, sorted and packed by machinery. So, when the ripe fruit is bought by a housewife, it is really 'untouched by human hands'.
